Mentor Program

*Marine Corps Air Station
Yuma, Arizona*

Mentoring is a process, which links an experienced person with a less experienced person to foster career development and professional growth.

Individuals who volunteer to participate in the CCLD Program complete a 360-degree assessment tool. Based on the strengths and weaknesses that are reflected from the 360 results, the participant works with a mentor to create an Individual Leadership Development Plan (ILDLP). The ILDP includes training and other developmental activities that can assist the participant in increased proficiency.

Mentors should be one or two grades senior to the participant, and cannot be their first or second-level supervisor.

Rewards for the Mentor
